Morgan, Joseph, 1671?-ca. 1745, supposed author.

The history of the kingdom of Basaruah, containing a relation of the most memorable transactions, revolutions and heroic exploits in that kingdom, from the first foundation thereof unto this present time. Collected from the most ancient records of that country, and translated into our language, not only for delight, but for the abundant instruction that may be learned therefrom, in these remote parts. Written in discharge of the trust reposed in the author by His Majesty, for the discovery of foreign things. By a traveller in Basaruah.

Contents.—Continued.

Lady those eyes, Hold out my heart, Good morrow fair ladies of the May, Whither away so fast? Blow shapereid, blow, Deep lamming, Farewell didadulful, O fly not, Thynne let pity move thee, How must I die recurrences, Lady if I through grief, Cease mine eyes, Do you not know? Where are thou wanton? What ails my darling, Say dear will you not have me? Arise get up my dear, Love learns by laughing, This love is but a wanton fit, Though Phillis lost her love, Spring-time matcheth every length.
